Juichi Wakisaka

Racing driver Juichi Wakisaka began his racing career in karting in 1991. In 1995, he competed in the Japanese F3 Championship, winning Rookie of the Year. The following year, in 1996, he became the first Japanese champion in six years. Later, in 1998, he served as a test driver for F1 Jordan Mugen-Honda.
After his return to Japan, Wakisaka competed in Formula Nippon (now Super Formula) and the All Japan Grand Touring Car Championship (now Super GT), winning five races in Formula Nippon, and 11 in Super GT. In 2002 he won the Super GT Series Championship, and in 2006 became double champion by winning both the Drivers' Championship and the Teams' Championship. His team won the Teams' Championship again in 2008, and he became double champion again in 2009.
As a proud three-time Super GT Series Champion, his outstanding skills, fame and popularity have earned him the nickname of "Mr. Super GT." In 2019, he successfully led the Lexus Team to win the Super GT 500 Series Championship as team manager, while at the same time serving as TGR Ambassador for Toyota Gazoo Racing.
